Racing at Nashville.

(By Associated Press.)
NASHVILLE, TENN., November 18.—The Tennessee Breeders' Association will inaugurate a seven days' race at Cumberland Park to-morrow, with six well filled events. S. M. Apperson, of Little Rock, will be the presiding judge, and Fred Gerhardt will do the starting. The number of horses at the track is unusually large, and fourteen carloads leave Latonia to-night for Cumberland Park. To-night the weather is clear and warm, and the track fast.

ANNAPOLIS TO TRY TO PILE UP BIG SCORE

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
ANNAPOLIS, MD., November 18.—The Navy team will play the last game of its season on the local grounds to-morrow, their opponents being the eleven of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute. Last year the Navy defeated Annapolis mainly through the work of their remarkable back, Carpenter, now with the University of North Carolina, but the team is not thought to be so strong this season. Although the Navy expects to win handsomely, the policy being to pile up a big score, the policy being to hide their real strength from West Point.

Next week the final touches will be

Changes in Southern.

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., November 18.—The resignation of Lee McClung from the position of assistant freight traffic manager of the Southern Railway, with headquarters at Louisville, Ky., to assume himself with Yale University, has resulted in a number of changes in the service of the Southern Railway, to take effect December 15th. The following appointments have been made:

R. L. McKellar, now assistant general freight agent at Memphis, Tenn., has succeeded Mr. McClung at Louisville; Ransdell Clifton, now division freight agent at Raleigh, N. C., will succeed Mr. McKellar as assistant general freight agent at Memphis; E. H. Shaw, at present division freight and passenger agent of the Southern Railway, will succeed Mr. Clifton as division freight agent at Raleigh.

ERECT MONUMENT IN HONOR OF A HORSE

Popular Subscription Started by Wealthy Farmer of Indiana.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
LOUISVILLE, KY., November 18.—In honor of Bertha W., a fine mare owned by Clarence Tucker, of Georgetown, which fell dead on the Corydon (Indiana) track last fall after winning the deciding heat of a free for all trot, a monument paid for by public subscription is to be erected inside the track enclosure at the County Fair there this fall, and to be dedicated with appropriate ceremonies. The contribution was started by J. S. Primer, a wealthy farmer of Harrison county.

Bertha W. was one of the best known mares in Southern Indiana. For some years she had been campaigned. She had not a trace of yellow in her whole make-up. She was a hard worker always. She won race after race, and she became so popular and so well known as a mare of the best quality that a popular saying in Southern Indiana was, "Try like Bertha W."

STORES COMBINE TO FIGHT PILFERING

Losses of Twenty-one Concerns in a Year Amount to $500,000.

(By Associated Press.)
NEW YORK, November 18.—Losses of half a million dollars through shoplifting has been suffered during the past year by twenty-one department stores in this city, whose proprietors, because of such losses have formed an alliance to fight petty pilfering. The fact that such an alliance has been formed came out yesterday when a woman was given a fifteen day sentence in the Court of General Sessions, after having pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing goods valued at $5.04 from a department store.

Hitherto the storekeepers have been willing to let offenders off with a fine, and the court, as a rule, has acted accordingly.

Before sentence was imposed to-day the attorney who had prosecuted the case, said that his law firm had been retained by an alliance of twenty-one department stores to prosecute every case of shoplifting.

PREVENTED PNEUMONIA.

E. M. Clifford of Buffalo Tells of His Cure by Father John's Medicine.

Mr. Edward Clifford, of 384 Sandusky Street, Buffalo, N. Y., writes: For the benefit of others I most cheerfully recommend Father John's Medicine as a body builder and sure cure to any person troubled with colds and coughs. I was troubled with a bad cold and pneumonia. After the threatened pneumonia. After the first bottle I found myself much improved, and after the third bottle I was entirely cured of the cough and soon began to gain in strength and flesh. You are entirely welcome to use my name. I will be ready at any moment to recommend your medicine to any person. (Signed) Edward M. Clifford, Buffalo, N. Y. I was cured of my cold and pneumonia by your medicine. No alcohol or weakening stimulants.

CLIMPE AT LATEST BOOKS.

THE LADY OF LOYALTY HOUSE. By Justin Huntley McCarthy. 290 pp. $1.50. Harper & Brothers, New York.

A gallant and a dashing man, blithe and debonair, was Hercules Halfman, ex-buccannier, gentleman, adventurer and soldier, a fortune teller everywhere. Returning to Harby village one October evening in 1642 from many a strange doing overseas, he came upon doctors in England that were hardly less strange, for not far away in Charleston, South Carolina, a Mr. Cromwell, member for that place, had officially pushed the interests of the Parliament by raising troops of volunteers and having violent hands upon the university place. The doctor, it was said, was a halfman. But one thing was certain—clearly his intended character of pipe-smoking, ale-drinking citizen was wholly unsuited to the coming play. Wherefore, in a fifty, he was taken down, and now stood inevitably as naked as a plucked fowl, while he considered what costume he should wear and what character he should choose to interpret.

Politically and opinionatively, Halfman was as well as suggested, a colorless as a glass of water, as passive as a verb. In the matter of assuming a role for his new life in England, his mind had to consider only the fun of the thing. Of his rights, and of his duties, he knew nothing, and he was not to know. He was a halfman, and his worst enemy could not deny that Halfman knew a pretty girl when he saw one. In this department of universal knowledge he had strong opinions of his own, and, therefore, it was not to be surprised that he found the story in many pages old, enlisted heart and soul in the service of the beautiful Lady Brilliana, of Harby, the Lady of Loyalty House, and as an ardent, a cavalier as ever doffed his hat to her. He was a halfman, and his worst enemy could not deny that Halfman knew a pretty girl when he saw one. Chapter IV. They had "A Contest in Will Power," with results eminently favorable to Herwyn. Said he, when all was over: "I had to show you that my will is stronger than yours, and you made the lesson hard." Later they reached Belgrade, and there it was the lady's turn to spring a surprise. "I am the Princess Gatrina," she said quietly, "the next in succession to the Serbian throne." Not merely a princess, but a betrothed princess! Small wonder, indeed, that poor Herwyn's head throbbed, and he turned dizzy and faint. For a minute he was as good as dead. "You must not judge me by this exhibition," I said, as a sort of apology. "My head pained me for a moment. That's all. I'm better now again. A sorry and flimsy excuse which Prince Albrecht, however, saw through as he looked through his window-glass. Herwyn, however, was not the sort to savor in his affections. His love for the Princess ended through all the exciting events preceding the war. He was a man of action, and his Queen, Draga, it did not fall far from her, as the Queen's advocate, Gatrina, approached him with an overture for a loan on behalf of the Serbian government. All Albrecht's court courtesies could not even then shake it out of him, even though the quarrel between them grew so fierce that it found a culmination on the dueling field. In the end, we are glad to say, Herwyn's ally, half-brother, and Herwyn was once more free to love where he listed.

Mr. Marchmont's story is not remarkable for originality. It is dashing and adventurous enough, however, to afford entertainment to those who like this type of story still offers attractions.

CHRISTMAS EVE ON LONESOME. By John Fox, Jr. 224 pp. $1.50. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

Mr. John Fox sticks to the Kentucky mountains, whom he knows, bone and sinew, and loves, with the result that what he writes continues to have the force and graphicness that grow only out of descriptions of matters thoroughly understood. The average reader, however, who knows the Kentucky mountains offers abundant background of picturesqueness, humor and pathos to the writer of stories, and Mr. Fox's thorough acquaintance with these things has enabled him to do so in the simple, direct, and unadorned style that is his strength.

It is not to be expected, however, as Brilliana said, that love could in a trice solve such hostilities as this. There are complications, serious ones, and Evan's life is for some time in the balance.
